Unravelling the mechanisms of recognition and internalization of nanoparticles by cells

PhD thesis

to obtain the degree of PhD at the University of Groningen
on the authority of the Rector Magnificus Prof. C. Wijmenga and in accordance with the decision by the College of Deans.
This thesis will be defended in public on Friday 6 November 2020 at 11.00 hours

The work described in this thesis was performed at the department Nanomedicine and Drug Targeting at the University of Groningen, The Netherlands. The research was funded by the European Research Council (ERC) as part of the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation program under the grant agreement no 637614 (NanoPaths).

The printing of this thesis was financially supported by the research institute GUIDE and the Graduate School of the University of Groningen.

Table of content

Chapter 1	Introduction: Interactions at the cell membrane and pathways of internalization of nano-sized materials for nanomedicine	7
	Scope and outline of the thesis	42
Chapter 2	Comparison of the uptake mechanisms of zwitterionic and negatively charged liposomes by HeLa cells	47
Chapter 3	Preparation and cell uptake of liposome and liposome-coated silica: effects of nanoparticle rigidity and role of curvature-sensing proteins	79
Chapter 4	Dynamic response of the pathways involved in nanoparticle uptake in a genome-wide time-resolved forward genetic screening	119
Chapter 5	Novel insights by forward genetic screening into nanoparticle uptake by cells: role of heparan sulphate and apolipoprotein receptors in the early interactions on the cell membrane	163
Chapter 6	General discussion and future perspectives	211
	Nederlandse samenvatting	228
