Acknowledgements

This thesis has been completed with the help and cooperation of many colleagues and individuals at the University of Groningen. During my stay in Groningen, I have benefitted greatly from the stimulating research environment created by the Faculty of Economics and Business and the SOM Research School.

I am particularly grateful to my promoters Prof. Jakob de Haan and Prof. Elmer Sterken, and my co-promoter Dr. Michael Koetter for the intellectual guidance and advice. Their liberal style of supervision and encouragement to explore my own research topics were essential contributors to the quality of my work. I would also like to express my gratitude to the committee members of my thesis, Prof. Robert Lensink, Prof. Philip Molyneux, and Prof. Steven Ongena for reading the manuscript and for their valuable comments.

I am also indebted to Tammo Bijmolt, Jan Jacobs, Gerard Kuper, Laura Spierdijk, and other faculty members at the University of Groningen for many valuable discussions and advice during my study period. From the outside of faculty, I would like to mention, without implication, Martin Čihák, Thomas Kick, Evzen Kocenda, and Subal Kumbhakar for their cooperation and co-authorship of different research papers.

This is also the place to express my gratitude to the SOM bureau members, Astrid Beerta, Rina Koning, and Ellen Nienhuis as well as our esteemed Ph.D. coordinator Martin Land, for their constant support and kind assistance to resolve any type of administrative issue, be it remuneration of travel expenses or problems with finding accommodation in Groningen. Their kind cooperation has been very helpful and has saved me a great deal of time, which I was able to devote to my research.

Perhaps I would not even have started writing this thesis if I had not met Umed Temurshoev, my classmate from CERGE-EI and a good friend, who recommended me to apply for a Ph.D. program in Groningen. I am very thankful to Umed for being around during all the challenging and exciting times of our studies both in Groningen and in Prague.

This list of other colleagues and friends can go on continuously, so I will just limit myself by mentioning, without implication, Matilda Dorotic, Tomek Katur, Aljar Meesters, Ernst Osinga, Froukje Schaaf, Stanislav Stakhovich, and other members of our dynamic Ph.D. student community. I am also thankful to Richard Jong-A-Pin for being always ready to provide suggestions and advice when needed, and Kees Bouwman for his help on LATEX formatting. I would also like to extend my gratitude to all the other friends and colleagues, whose names were omitted here due to space constraints, but who will always occupy an honorable place in my memory.

Finally, I would like to thank my family members: my father, Vladimir, my mother, Marine, and my brother, Arsen, for their patience and moral support during the time I was far away from home. The most important thing for me is to realize that I was able to achieve something that my parents can be proud of.
