Acknowledgments

As a Colombian one of the things I am most fond of is dancing. We dance to celebrate, we dance to mourn, we dance to communicate, we just dance. Some songs are easy and smooth; others require complicated turns and tricky steps. Yet, the key to dancing well is to connect with your partner. Each dance is unique, because each partner has a unique way of dancing. In many ways, working on this dissertation and doing my PhD at the ICS in Groningen was like dancing to many songs; while delightful, some songs were challenging and some steps seemed hard. But it was the unique support of great people what made this process a wonderful dance. In the following I want to thank each of you who have allowed me to connect with you.

First and foremost, I thank my supervisors Rafael, Andreas and Jacob, for giving me the opportunity to carry out this project at the ICS. Working with you has been an encouraging, delightful and rewarding experience. Your support motivated me to explore my own questions and ideas. Your active instruction guided me through the challenging times. You have constantly supported me in finding a way to combine my interests and you have made my transition from economics to sociology a rich and encouraging experience. I feel so privileged to have such a wonderful supervision team.

Rafael, thank you for giving me your fresh point of view on every problem I studied. I value the time you devoted to this project, your always-encouraging words, and our common appreciation for good technology (a.k.a. Apple products).

Andreas, thank you for joining my supervision team in the third year. Your insights have helped me become more rigorous in my work. Also thank you for your supervision in my teaching and for trusting me with your course.

Jacob, I want to particularly thank you for being my daily supervisor. Since day one, and almost on a daily basis, you have been actively involved in my formation as a social scientist. You have been open to my questions, quick to react when challenges appear, and patient to teach me when I struggled to understand so many things. Thank you for being there for me beyond my research project. I treasure our conversations and your efforts to make work exciting. It has been so much fun working with you and I hope we can continue collaborating much more.

I am very grateful to the assessment committee that read my thesis, comprised of Prof. dr. Tom Snijders, Prof. dr. Vincent Buskens, and Prof. dr. Arno Riedl. Thank you so much for your valuable comments and suggestions, which made this thesis a better final product.

At the ICS in Groningen I have been part of a multicultural and interdisciplinary environment that has made my experiences enjoyable and the work thrilling. To my year group, Fernando, Miranda, Kim, Britta, Gina and Thomas, thank you for the great times. From you I have learned the do's and don'ts of how to attend a PhD event and enjoy it to the fullest. To my colleagues in WOT-team and in the NNC-team, thank you. You have inspired me with your own research and made my work so much better with your comments and suggestions.

I want to thank Lea Ellwardt. Lea, it's a joy that I can say you are a friend, colleague and co-author. I am very thankful for all I have learned from you, especially in my struggles to understanding multilevel modeling.

I also extend my thanks to the ICS staff for helping me with so many administrative tasks through out my project and during my teaching periods. I am especially thankful to Saskia Simon and Gea van Wijk for this.

During my PhD I have been able to collaborate with other co-authors at different universities. I have a debt of gratitude to Penelope Hernandez. Penelope, you have impacted my life in a very deep way. Thank you for your trust, for the hours we have spent on the board solving game-theoretic problems, and for your constant willingness to work with me and to invest in me.

I want to thank Anxo Sanchez for your participation, together with Penelope, on my research idea that resulted in the paper corresponding to Chapter 4 in this book. Thank you for being a great host when we visited you in Madrid. It's a privilege to co-author my first publication with you.

During my PhD studies I visited the Laboratory of Experimental Economics at the University of Valencia (LINEEX) on multiple opportunities. I also was able to run the experiment for Chapter 5 there. To all the LINEEX team I want to say thank you, gracias and gracias. In particular I want to thank my friend and colleague Guillem Martinez. Papi! I have thoroughly enjoyed the opportunities we had to work together in Valencia, Groningen and New York. You are also my z-tree mentor and you have never left any of my doubts unsolved. I also want to thank Rebeca Parra for your permanent support with my programming questions.

I want to especially thank Ernesto Reuben for allowing me to visit Columbia Business School, and for being a marvelous host and mentor. I am thrilled that what started as a research visit became a joint collaboration. Thank you for the many hours working together and for teaching me so much about experimental research. I am eager to continue developing our work projects.

During my first visit to Columbia I was fortunate to coincide with Sascha Behnk. Sascha, you are a great friend and I enjoyed the many fun moments we shared while living for some months in New York. Especially the long discussions we had in the subway, which led to the basis of a beautiful research project. I hope we can soon continue our joint work.

I would like to thank Alejandro Palacio and Alexandra Cortes at the Universidad Industrial de Santander, in Colombia, for your generosity and support. Alejandro, working with you has been a wonderful experience. You are the true example of the positive influence a good teacher can have on a bad student. Thank you for being the first person that chose to trust me and to motivate me to pursue an academic career. I feel honored that we have continued working together since my undergraduate times.

In the four and a half years I have spent in Groningen, I have made some close friends; most of them because we shared a common love for food and spending time around the table with others.

Mayersita, I want to thank you for your friendship. Your Colombian meals always cheered me up and gave me strength to continue working. Georgia and Kostas, thank you for showing me how close Colombians and Greeks can be, for an awesome time in Greece and for the many kilos I gained visiting your families. Maja and Astrid, thank you for being the best roommates and for the great times in the kitchen, despite of the green old couch. Ronald and Sieuwke, and now Bram, thank you for being my Dutch family. You generously opened the doors of your house for me so many times. My small group people, every Wednesday was a treat, sharing Dutch, Colombian, Indonesian, Nigerian, Malaysian and Chinese meals. You have been wonderful.

If dancing and food are important for a Colombian, family is sacred. I want to thank with all my heart each and every member of my family. I am especially grateful to my parents. You are always encouraging me and sharing your wisdom and advice with me. Thank you. To my sisters, my niece, and to my favorite dancing partner, my grandma, thank you. Gracias a toda mi familia hermosa por su amor, su respaldo, y tanta buena pachanga juntos. Los amo.

I want to thank Sharlane, my love, for making my life so much better. We have walked a short-long path together. You are the girl of my dreams and I am honored and grateful that this same year of my graduation we will get married. You make 2015 the best year of my life.

Last, but not least at all, I want to thank God for his blessings and for giving me so many opportunities in this life, for his new mercies everyday, and for making my life a celebration with so many great dancing partners!

ICS dissertation series

The ICS-series presents dissertations of the Interuniversity Center for Social Science Theory and Methodology. Each of these studies aims at integrating explicit theory formation with state-of-the-art empirical research or at the development of advanced methods for empirical research. The ICS was founded in 1986 as a cooperative effort of the universities of Groningen and Utrecht. Since 1992, the ICS expanded to the University of Nijmegen. Most of the projects are financed by the participating universities or by the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (NWO). The international composition of the ICS graduate students is mirrored in the increasing international orientation of the projects and thus of the ICS-series itself.
