Acknowledgements

First, I would like to give great thank to Piet Pellenbarg, my Promotor, and Wim Meester, my Co-promotor, without whom I could not have started and finally complete this PhD research project. After this long period of working with them, I can say that I learnt a lot not only about economic geography itself but also about the methodology, and crucially about the way of thinking, approaching, planning and realising research in this field. Working with them has been a very precious and enriching experience for me, both professionally and personally, so I will be always grateful to them for that. Ultimately, I can say that when you have the opportunity to work with people like Piet and Wim, you can understand very well from your own experience why such a small country, like the Netherlands, has become a world leader country in academic research both in the field of spatial sciences and in others.

Secondly, I would like to thank the members of the Assessment Committee: Prof. Gert-Jan Hospers, Prof. P.P.P. Huigen, and Prof. Lanfranco Senn, for reading carefully the thesis and giving many important suggestions. As regards Lanfranco, I want to say that I am also grateful for his support in this research from the very beginning. He immediately appreciated the potential of this research project when I first discussed it with him many years ago, and supported its realisation, providing several suggestions, funding some of the related activities (upgrading of the contact details of the firms; development of the electronic questionnaire), as the former Director of Certet-Bocconi, and agreeing to establish cooperation between the research centre headed by him and the University of Groningen, in order to promote the survey, which was an important strategy for its success with the research population (Italian entrepreneurs).

Thirdly, I want to thank all the members of the Department of Economic Geography at the Faculty of Spatial Sciences, who have always been very hospitable and kind with me, and put me always in the best conditions any time I came to Groningen. In particular, let me mention: Jouke van Dijk, who has always been very hospitable and always available to discuss the project, and involved me in the activities of the Department when I was there; Aleid Brouwer, who very kindly helped me in the final stages before the PhD defence; Jeannet Brondsema, who was always very kind to me; Rixt Bijker, Sierdjan Koster, Frans Sijtsma, Viktor Venhorst, and all the scholars and researchers at the Department and the Faculty whom I met there, who attended the seminars I gave there, and who gave me many helpful suggestions as well.

A special thank you then goes to several other persons who supported me on this long and great journey. I wish to single out: Ilaria Mariotti, who originally introduced me to Piet and Wim, and then I had the chance to start this great adventure; Pierpaolo Moio, who did a key job in the realisation of the survey, as he created and developed the web application for the interactive map; Clara D'Orlando, who contributed to the completion of the data analyses; Carlo Erminero and Caterina del Fante (Carlo Erminero & Co.) who made available the software used for the web survey and the data collection; Attilio Abbiezzi (Webattitude), who provided the emailing services; Paolo Tarulli, who helped to revise and upgrade the contact details of the firms; Patricia Ellman, who carefully and thoroughly revised the English language of this final dissertation (I hope I did not miss any of her corrections!); some persons who kindly supported me in making contact with the firms: Stefano Bombace, Davide Dal Maso, Gennaro di Cello, Fabio Finizzer, Carlo Imbimbo, Ila Maltese, Giuseppe Meduri, Carlo Perretti, Giulia Pesaro, Saverio Rodà, Stefano Zimbalatti.

Contacting the firms, and convincing them to respond, was actually a very critical stage of the web survey (being aware of the very low response rates usually experienced in Italy with surveys involving firms). That is why I also want to thank the local firms' associations and the local institutions (and the people working there with whom I was in contact), who supported me in that way: Trento Sviluppo (Giorgio Fiorini, Giulia Fiorini), Associazione Industriali Reggio Emilia (Davide Bezzecchi), Unindustria Treviso (Federica Fontanin), Associazione Industriali di Novara (Olivetta Federici), Assolombarda (Andrea Fioni, Valeria Negri), Consorzio Italy Export (Davide Bertinotti). Moreover, I am also very thankful to the nine experts who took part in a direct semi-structured interview, which was extremely important for the qualitative explanatory analyses carried out in Chapter 5: Giuseppe Arcucci, Stephen Brandes, Vittorio Maglia, Carlo Moser, Stefano Nigro, Vincenzo Paradiso, Laurent Sansoucy, Alessandro Spadola, Federico Zardi; and to all entrepreneurs, managers of the firms located in Italy, who participated in the web survey by completing the electronic questionnaire.

Last, but not least, I want to thank my parents who, although not involved in the actual research project, enthusiastically appreciated the idea of this project, and always supported the effort I was making to realise it: my father Filippo; and my mother Enza, in whose memory I dedicate all the work I have done, and this thesis.
