Curriculum Vitae

Doety Prins was born on the the 24th of October 1986 in Sneek, The Netherlands. In 2004 she finished secondary school at Dockinga college in Dokkum. Subsequently, she started studying medicine at the University of Groningen. Clinical internships were followed in the University Medical Center Groningen, Antonius Ziekenhuis in Sneek, and Magunga hospital in Korogwe, Tanzania. The last year of her master was dedicated to research and internship at the department of ophthalmology at the University Medical Center Groningen. During the research internship, under supervision of prof. dr. F.W. Cornelissen, she studied neuroanatomical changes in patients with macular degeneration. In 2011 she was awarded an MD/PhD trajectory by the Junior Scientific Masterclass, which allowed her to continue the research in this field. During the MD/PhD trajectory, Doety presented her scientific work at national and international conferences on ophthalmology and visual perception. In 2012, she obtained her medical degree. Currently, Doety is working as a resident at the department of ophthalmology at the University Medical Center Groningen.
