Essays on global business networks, governance, and institutions
Castaldi, Sarah

IMPORTANT NOTE: You are advised to consult the publisher's version (publisher's PDF) if you wish to cite from it. Please check the document version below.

Document Version
Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Publication date:
2018

Link to publication in University of Groningen/UMCG research database

Citation for published version (APA):

Copyright
Other than for strictly personal use, it is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Take-down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

Downloaded from the University of Groningen/UMCG research database (Pure): http://www.rug.nl/research/portal. For technical reasons the number of authors shown on this cover page is limited to 10 maximum.
Essays on Global Business Networks, Governance, and Institutions

PhD thesis

to obtain the degree of PhD at the University of Groningen on the authority of the Rector Magnificus Prof. E. Sterken and in accordance with the decision by the College of Deans.

This thesis will be defended in public on Thursday 1 November 2018 at 11.00 hours

by

Sarah Castaldì
born on 7 October 1986 in Stuttgart, Duitsland
Supervisors
Prof. S. Beugelsdijk
Prof. J.T. van der Vaart

Co-supervisor
Dr. M.M. Wilhelm

Assessment Committee
Prof. A.R. Muller
Prof. K. Meyer
Prof. E. Dietzenbacher
Acknowledgements

So this is it, I finally made it: I have successfully sealed my doctorhood, and completed the most amazing journey of my life. Would I do it again? Probably not. Do I regret it? Hell no. I have learnt so much about myself, and met the most inspiring people along the way, some of which I can now call my dear friends. Yes, it was challenging, and I had to manage an emotional rollercoaster combining moments of extreme happiness (i.e., all the firsts: first conference acceptance, an R&R, or even a survey response) with depressive thoughts (i.e., not so nice firsts like a rejection letter...). But it was certainly worth it and I would not have done it any other way. I would like to devote these first pages of this PhD dissertation to thank a couple of people that have supported me throughout this process.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisors: Miriam, Sjoerd and Taco. Miriam, thank you for your loyalty, honesty, and proactivity, you are an amazing supervisor and became a close friend. I love your commitment to this PhD project, your constructive feedback, and the way you stimulated my critical thinking. Sjoerd, you are truly the ‘driver’ of this PhD project: not only did you provide me with clear feedback and directions throughout this project, but you also enabled me to embark on a very exciting research project. You opened up new possibilities for me, pushed were needed, and supported me throughout this journey. Taco, as ‘the advocate of the devil’, you raised questions that no one else did, and you truly made this PhD project better. Your genuine interest in me, as a person and researcher, made this a wonderful experience and working atmosphere. Thank you all so much, I could not have wished for a better supervision team, you shaped the researcher that I am today.

Second, I want to thank my co-authors, Sathyajit and Vincent, for their input and contribution on Chapter 2 of this PhD thesis. Your knowledge and help has immensely improved the paper, and I am proud to say that our hard work is rewarded with an R&R in a top journal.

I am honored to have these experts on my reading committee: Klaus Meyer, Alan Mueller, and Eric Dietzenbacher. Thank you very much for your time and willingness to assess my PhD Thesis, and share your expertise with me.

I am indebted to the support of many individuals who helped me establishing a practitioners’ network, designing my survey questionnaire, and collecting primary data in multiple countries: I would like to express my gratitude to the Business Social Compliance Initiative (BSCI), which allowed me to attend their Annual Conference in 2014, and connected me to many practitioners in the field. Moreover, I would like to thank all my interview partners for their time and willingness to respond to my questions, and to help me develop a survey questionnaire for supplier firms. For the data collection, I am thankful to many local institutes and research agencies that were willing to support my research and reach out to supplier factories. In particular, I would like to thank: the Leathergoods and Footwear Manufacturers & Exporters Association (LFMEAB) in Bangladesh, the Brazilian Textile and Apparel Industry Association (ABIT), the Indian Chamber of Commerce in Kolkata, the Indonesian Textile Association (API) and the Indonesian Footwear Association (APRISINDO), the Malaysian Textile Manufacturers Association (MTMA), the Peruvian Exporters Association (ADEX), the Leather and Footwear Research Institute (ICPI) in Romania, and the National Chamber of Exporters of Sri Lanka (NCE). Moreover, I would also like to thank the Zhongnan University of Economics and Law in Wuhan, the NED University of Engineering and Technology in Karachi, and the Institute for European Studies in Ha Noi for collecting data in the respective countries. Some individuals also help me reaching out to local contacts, translating surveys, constructing databases, or calling factories for follow-ups: Bouke, Chengyong, Halit, Hammad, Jiasi – thank you so much for your help! I am also extremely grateful for some help in collecting data at international fashion fairs – thank you, my Portuguese friends at Universidade Catolica do Porto, for your efforts and support at Modtissimo (Porto Fashion Week), and thank you, Sander and Adrian, for your commitment at Premiere Vision Paris.

A warm thank you goes to many colleagues at GEM for providing a nice working atmosphere, helpful suggestions at seminars, and relaxing coffee and lunch breaks. Robbert, thank you so much for all our (theory) discussions – you are an inspiration to me. Rian, thank you for being my go-to person, the one I could always turn to for personal or work-related issues. My teaching responsibilities over the years were well organized, and I want to thank Bartjan, Henk, Kees, and Mariko for their great course coordination. Special thanks goes to Kees with whom I was co-teaching since the very beginning, and who supported me throughout the whole process. Thank you ladies – Miriam, Mariko, Padma, Rian, Anna, Milena, Esha, Rieneke – and gentlemen – Robbert, Slava, Gary – for nice evening get-togethers and talks: our monthly dinners were a great addition to my PhD experience. Johannes, Laetitia, and Marianna – thank you for many interesting discussions and meetings, as well as for helping me out with cookies during teaching breaks. I am also indebted to all the administrative support that I have received throughout these years. Thank you, Gemmies, especially Jenny, Sylvia, Hermi, Astrid, and Ineke, for helping out on so many occasions. It was great working with you, and I am going to miss the weekly chatter. I also want to thank the SOM office, and in particular Rina, Ellen, Arthur, and Kristian, for their great support.

Thanks to my friends and family for their love and moral support, I could not have done this without you. Nori, thank you for endless discussions about research and life, and for always being there for me. I am happy you returned to Groningen for your PhD, and we got the chance to pick up where we left off after the IE&B Masters. Vincent, thank you for making this PhD adventure a wonderful experience for me. I am grateful for the many talks, and sometimes pointless discussions, and the countless co-working sessions. But most of all, I am thankful for who you are as a person. Thank you, Anneli, Kirsten, Marjon, Hilda, and Rouke for making my life as PhD student more interesting and enjoyable. Horseback riding has been very important for me during my PhD, and a special thanks goes to you, Anneli, for your patience and guidance during countless lessons. Katrin, thank you for being just a phone call away any time of the day – your words and encouragement, and your positive energy help me to get through the rough patches of my life. Bea, thank you for always believing in me, assuring me that everything was going to be alright – you inspired me to live my life, and pursue my dreams. I also want to thank Jurrie and Irene for opening the doors to their home for me and making me feel like family – your encouragement, advice and guidance is invaluable. I also want to thank my grandma:

_Oma, ich danke dir, dass du immer an mich geglaubt hast und fuer mich da warst._

Last but not least, I want to thank Shelley. Thank you for being my rock, my safe place, my best friend, my heart. I know these past years have not been easy on us, but I am so lucky that I always had you by my side. Your unconditional love and support brings us to greater heights – thank you, babe, for everything! I am looking forward to the future with you.

Sarah Castaldi
Groningen, July 2018
“I am looking forward to the future, and feeling grateful for the past” – Mike Rowe, 2014
Contents

List of Tables ................................................................................................................................. ix
List of Figures ................................................................................................................................. x

Chapter 1: Introduction of Dissertation .......................................................................................... 1
  1.1. Business Networks in the Context of International Business ................................................. 1
    1.1.1. The Rise of Global Business Networks .............................................................................. 1
    1.1.2. Global Business Networks as a Hybrid Mode of Governance .......................................... 2
  1.2. Global Business Networks and Institutions ............................................................................ 7
    1.2.1. New Institutional Economics (NIE): Formal Institutional Constraints for Global Business Networks ...................................................................................................................... 7
    1.2.2. New Organizational Institutionalism (NOI): the Importance of Informal Institutional Structures .............................................................................................................................................. 8
  1.3. Organizational Response Strategies: Organizations as Active Agents ..................................... 10
  1.4. Contributions and Theoretical Implications ............................................................................. 12
  1.5. Managerial Implications .......................................................................................................... 14
  1.6. Limitations and Suggestions for Future Research ................................................................. 15
  1.7. Outline of the PhD Thesis ....................................................................................................... 17

Chapter 2: Business Group Affiliation and Foreign Subsidiary Performance ............................... 23
  2.1. Introduction ............................................................................................................................. 24
  2.2. Theory and Hypotheses .......................................................................................................... 26
    2.2.1. Generic BG-Affiliation Advantages .................................................................................. 28
    2.2.2. Transferability of BG-Affiliation Advantages Abroad ...................................................... 30
    2.2.3. Transferability of BG-Affiliation Advantages across Sectors .......................................... 34
  2.3. Methodology ........................................................................................................................ 36
    2.3.1. Sample and Data Collection ............................................................................................ 36
    2.3.2. Variables and Measures .................................................................................................. 37
    2.3.3. Estimation Procedure ...................................................................................................... 38
Chapter 3: Buyer-Supplier Collaboration for Social Sustainability in Global Supply Chains: the Moderating Role of Institutions

3.1. Introduction .................................................................................................................. 48
3.2. Literature Review ........................................................................................................... 50
  3.2.1. Implementing Social Sustainability Practices in Global Supply Chains ............ 50
  3.2.2. The Role of Institutions for Sustainability Practice Implementation ............... 51
3.3. Hypotheses .................................................................................................................... 53
3.4. Data and Methods ......................................................................................................... 58
  3.4.1. Research Context .................................................................................................. 58
  3.4.2. Sample and Procedure ......................................................................................... 59
  3.4.3. Measures ............................................................................................................... 61
  3.4.4. Construct Validity .................................................................................................. 65
  3.4.5. Common Method Variance .................................................................................... 67
3.5. Results .......................................................................................................................... 67
3.6. Discussion ...................................................................................................................... 73
  3.6.1. Theoretical Implications ....................................................................................... 73
  3.6.2. Managerial Implications ....................................................................................... 75
  3.6.3. Limitations and Future Research ........................................................................... 76
3.7. Conclusion...................................................................................................................... 77
 Appendix B ......................................................................................................................... 78
Chapter 4: Substantive, Selective, Symbolic, and Deficient: CSR Implementation Strategies in Global Supply Chains

4.1. Introduction...................................................................................................................... 81

4.2. Literature Review and Hypotheses .................................................................................. 84
   4.2.1. Implementation of CSR Standards in Global Supply Chains................................. 84
   4.2.2. A New Typology of CSR Implementation............................................................. 85
   4.2.3. Antecedents of Breadth and Depth of CSR Implementation................................. 87
   4.2.4. CSR Implementation Strategies: the Interplay between MNE Support and Supplier Motivation .................................................................................................................. 89

4.3 Data and Method .............................................................................................................. 92
   4.3.1. Research Context ..................................................................................................... 92
   4.3.2. Sample and Procedure ............................................................................................ 93
   4.3.3. Measures .................................................................................................................. 94
   4.3.4. Validity, Reliability, and Common Method Variance ............................................ 99
   4.3.5. Analysis .................................................................................................................... 101

4.4. Results .......................................................................................................................... 104

4.5. Discussion ....................................................................................................................... 107
   4.5.1. Summary .................................................................................................................. 107
   4.5.2. Theoretical Implications ....................................................................................... 109
   4.5.3. Managerial Implications ....................................................................................... 110
   4.5.4. Limitations and Avenues for Future Research ....................................................... 111

4.6. Conclusion ...................................................................................................................... 112

Appendix C .......................................................................................................................... 114

Chapter 5: Details about Primary Data Collection .................................................................. 117

5.1. Details about Practitioner Interviews .............................................................................. 117
5.2. Supplier-Level Survey and Data Collection .................................................................... 123
5.3. Institutional-Level Survey and Data Collection .............................................................. 136
Chapter 6: Summary ............................................................ 140
6.1. General Overview ............................................................ 140
6.2. Empirical Studies ............................................................ 141
6.3. Conclusion ......................................................................... 143

Chapter 7: Samenvatting .......................................................... 145
7.1. Algemeen Overzicht ........................................................... 145
7.2. Empirisch Onderzoek ........................................................ 147
7.3. Conclusie .......................................................................... 149

Chapter 8: Bibliography ............................................................ 150
List of Tables

1.1. Global Business Networks as Hybrid Governance Forms between Markets and Hierarchies .................................................................................................................. 3
1.2. Distinction between Diversified Business Groups and Supplier Networks ........ 6
2.1. Means, Standard Deviations, and Correlations .......................................................... 40
2.2. Main Regression Results ................................................................................................ 41
3.1. Construct Validity ........................................................................................................... 66
3.2. Means, Standard Deviations, and Correlations ............................................................ 68
3.3. OLS Regression Results with Cluster-Robust Standard Errors ................................. 70
4.1. Construct Validity ........................................................................................................... 100
4.2. Means, Standard Deviations, and Correlations ............................................................ 103
4.3. Results of the Cluster Analysis ...................................................................................... 104
4.4. OLS Regression Results ............................................................................................... 105
4.5. Parameter Estimates and Results of Multi-Nominal Logit Regression ........................ 106
5.1. List of Exploratory Practitioner Interviews ................................................................... 120
5.2. Details about the Primary Survey Data Collection ..................................................... 131
5.3. Country-Level Observations for Institutional Profiles ............................................... 136
List of Figures

1.1. Research Framework of this PhD Thesis ................................................................. 22
2.1. Marginal Effects of BG Affiliation on Foreign Subsidiary Performance ............... 42
3.1. Marginsplot with confidence intervals (formal institutions) ............................... 72
3.2. Marginsplot with confidence intervals (informal institutions) ......................... 73
4.1. Typology of CSR Implementation ........................................................................ 86
4.2. Variation in the Breadth of CSR Implementation .............................................. 96
4.3. Scatterplot: Breadth and Depth of Implementation ........................................... 97
4.4. Summary of Results ............................................................................................. 108