Acknowledgments

I would like to express my deepest gratitude to all those who have contributed to the completion of this PhD dissertation and my academic path. My PhD journey has been an incredibly transformative and rewarding experience filled with many fun and joyful moments, challenges, setbacks, accomplishments, friendships, and unexpected discoveries that I will cherish for a lifetime. I am certain that my PhD would not have been as enriching without the many people who have supported me along the way.

First and foremost, I would like to sincerely thank my four supervisors, Martijn van Zomeren, Ernestine Gordijn, Michal Reifen Tagar, and Eran Halperin, for their invaluable and ongoing support and mentorship. I feel incredibly fortunate to have had the opportunity to collaborate with four brilliant and inspiring academics who I have admired and come to see as role models in different ways. As I embarked on this PhD journey, I could never have envisioned the transformation it would bring, not only in terms of professional development but also personal growth. I remember some of you saying “trust the process” along the way, and I could not be more thankful for this process. You offered me the time, space, encouragement, and support needed to not only develop a broad range of skills needed to succeed in academia, but also to discover who I want to be as a researcher, educator, and academic. Each one of you has greatly shaped me into the researcher and mentor I am today, and for that, I am profoundly grateful.

Martijn and Ernestine, moving from Amsterdam to Groningen to do my PhD in a new environment was a big and exciting change for me, and I truly appreciate your efforts to ensure a smooth integration into the social psychology department. Martijn, I do not think anyone can give feedback as promptly as you do. Thank you for being so available, patient, supportive, and responsive to any of my requests. Even when I doubted myself, you always helped me gain a new perspective on the issues at hand. Importantly, you have helped me value the role of patience and persistence in academia, particularly during times of frustration and unexpected setbacks. You surely recognized the importance of maintaining a healthy work-life balance, encouraging me to prioritize self-care and wellbeing, which I came to increasingly value in my academic journey. I really appreciate your enthusiasm for seemingly challenging endeavors, from the NEMO project to my adventures in Southeast Asia and Israel. I have to especially thank you for the opportunity to co-organize the unforgettable Winds of Change conference in Appingedam, from which I have many fond memories. We had our only exclusive five-member team meeting at that conference where many discoveries were made, from peacocks to personal fun facts, in the year that Portugal won Eurovision.

Acknowledgments

Ernestine, you always and literally had an open door for me. Thank you for your advice, support, and trust in my initiatives and ideas. You always encouraged me to take on challenges and embrace opportunities I might have otherwise hesitated to explore. Still, you also acknowledged and helped me recognize the delicate balance between the “go for it” attitude and “step back” when prudence dictated. I really appreciate the enthusiasm and positivity you demonstrated in response to my requests and ideas. Silke was the leader of our pilot tests for the NEMO project, and I thank you for bringing her to planet Tyrosh, where Pykes and Dornes were struggling with an environmental collapse. We shared many fun social moments, such as SP group lunches, outings, and conferences, where we got to know each other better (and I learned that we share a background in dance). Thank you for your supportive role in helping me with the transition from PhD life to lectureship life in COVID-19 times. You consistently valued clear self-care boundaries and certainly encouraged me to place high importance on health and wellbeing. Thank you for strengthening my confidence in my path and emphasizing the idea that there are numerous pathways to build a career in academia.

Michal and Eran, I feel extremely lucky to have had the opportunity to be trained not only in the Groningen group, but also in the (former) IDC group (i.e., the PICR lab) in Israel. This context of Groningen-Israel gateway identity unquestionably expanded the scope of my training and allowed me to meet many wonderful and talented people. We all embraced the concept of hybrid supervision and collaboration at a time when Skype represented the pinnacle of technological sophistication, and Wi-Fi connection, almost miraculously, functioned optimally in (and only in) Martijn’s office. Despite communication and coordination challenges, I always felt your support and you were always there for me every step of the way. I must particularly thank you for your warm welcome and support during my research visits in Israel. My time in Israel was certainly a tremendously impactful experience, especially because I somehow ended up visiting you at peak war times. Still, I had a really great time at the IDC and made many incredible memories. A special thanks to Anat, Deborah, Eric, Noa, Oded, Oliver, Orly, Shira, Siwar, Tal, Tamar, Yoni, Yossi, and many former PICR lab members I had the pleasure to meet and learn from at the IDC or conferences.

Michal, I have the best memories of the Development of Political Thought conference in Padova. You encouraged me to venture into the intersection of social, developmental, and political psychology, which I truly enjoyed. Even though the NEMO project did not make it into this dissertation, it remains my favorite project of my PhD. I really appreciate your enthusiastic encouragement, thoughtful kindness, and warm generosity and presence throughout my PhD journey. You always had a word of comfort and support for me, all the while motivating me to go beyond my comfort zone. You often helped me realize there was always something new I could learn from any study, data, or critical comment, even when I felt every option had been meticulously (and intensely) dissected. Thank you for facilitating many networking opportunities and all the moments of fun, joy, and insight in Appingedam, Granada, Padova, and Israel. Eran, you have motivated and challenged me to push the boundaries of my own abilities in ways I never thought achievable. You encouraged me to always strive for excellence while helping me recognize that the journey/process itself can often be more valuable than the ultimate outcome. I am very thankful for how you integrated me into your lab and provided opportunities for my academic development and training. You have inspired me through your dedication to integrating social psychological research into applied settings to address critical societal issues, which has significantly influenced my research interests. One of the many things I have learned (and witnessed) from you and your lab is that collaboration is key to advance social psychology, and we can accomplish more when we truly embrace collective and collaborative projects. Thank you for your consistent guidance, care, and support throughout these years. I really enjoyed our time together not only online but also (over a drink and food) in Appingedam, Groningen, and Israel. I am sorry you could not be officially listed as a co-supervisor due to administrative constraints, but you are surely recognized as such.

Eran, Michal, Ernestine, and Martijn, all these years spent working alongside all of you will always have a special place in my heart. Thank you for everything you have done for me and for preparing me for a career in academia and beyond.

Then, I would like to thank the members of the assessment committee and corona for their constructive feedback on my dissertation and for being present at my defense on this special day. I am very happy to have a group of outstanding academics, whose work I admire and respect, critically evaluating and challenging my research.

I particularly want to express my heartfelt thanks to my paranymphs, Jannis and Max. We certainly bonded over drinks in the Minnaar, yet our connection transcended the boundaries of those borrels. Doing a PhD is undoubtedly demanding, but having friends to share the challenges, frustrations, and triumphs makes the journey markedly smoother and more enjoyable. We always valued the importance of community in academia, and I am thankful for the sense of unity, collaborative spirit, and friendship it has fostered among us. I could always count on you to passionately share and discuss research ideas and findings, presentations, data analyses, the state of teaching and research in academia, the latest gossip, existential academic crises, struggles, and personal adventures and travels. Thank you for your support, advice, kindness, encouragement, and all the fun and wonderful memories that I truly cherish. I have the greatest memories with you from borrels, dinners, parties, KLI courses, conferences, the epic writing retreat with the KLI SocCog group in Batenburg, Karaoke nights, and many social gatherings. Max, we cannot forget our SPSP experience, which was something to remember (whether we want to or not). Thank you for your positive attitude and help when R betrayed me, and I could no longer stare at my screen. Jannis, I continue to treasure the massive glass of wine in my office that you offered me as my Engerl. Thank you for spreading the joy when swimming at the back of Namkje's place and spontaneously joining a random concert at Noorderzon. I am deeply grateful to have shared a significant part of my PhD journey with both of you and to have you by my side as paronyms in my PhD defense. Cheers!

I must also extend my thanks to my main PhD collaborators. First, I have to thank all the dedicated students and research assistants who have collaborated with me and somehow contributed to data collection for my PhD. Then, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to some unique, inspiring, and amazing collaborators I have learned so much from. Roberto, thank you for your consistent encouragement, enthusiasm, and invaluable support. You were my fifth (informal) mentor on this longitudinal collaboration. Despite time zone differences, collaborating with you and your team in Chile has been a very enjoyable experience, and my time spent with you in Groningen was absolutely delightful. Muchas gracias! Linda, I must thank you for the warm welcome and integration at the SPSP conference in New Orleans. Thank you for offering me opportunities to connect with talented and awesome people and to taste the best oysters in NOLA. I had a really great and fun time with you (and your lab) in both New Orleans and Groningen. Even though the research visit to your lab was cancelled because of COVID-19, I truly appreciate your support and our long-distance collaboration with your (and former) lab members. To my EASP summer school team, I am grateful and proud of our ongoing online collaboration, and hopefully we will all meet in person one day. Special thanks to (the one and only) Smadar and Sophie for being such great leaders of the Social and Group Emotions group in COVID-19 times. Thank you to all the colleagues of the online EASP Summer School 2020.

Next, I would like to thank the members of the Faculty of Behavioural and Social Sciences at the University of Groningen, where I had a memorable time and had the pleasure to meet many amazing people throughout these years. I must particularly and wholeheartedly thank the members of the social psychology department. You made me feel at home, and I could not have asked for a better department to pursue my PhD. Thank you, Anita and Barbara, for your exceptional dedication as secretaries and for being a great source of help, support, and delightful company. I was fortunate to have crossed paths with different generations of wonderful and inspiring PhD students, each representing unique departmental eras. I would like to thank: Aafke, Anne, Anne Marthe, Arie, Babet, Berry, Bibiana, Birol, Carla, Cátia, Chantal, Chris, Ernestine, Felicity, Felix, Frank, Gonneke, Hedy, Jannis, Jolien, Julia, Julian, Justin, Kai, Katherine, Katja, Kim, Leonie, Lonneke[†], Luzia, Maja, Mariëlle, Marjolein, Marloes, Marlon, Martijn B., Martijn vZ, Max, Michel, Namkje, Nina, Otto, Reinder, Russell, Sabine, Susie, Tasja, Tom, Toon, Weiwei, Wim, Wolfgang, and Yasin. Thank you all for your support, the opportunities, and the many fun and unforgettable moments, such as borrels, collective gift productions, outings, SP group lunches, Daily Wing conspiracies, scavenger hunts, escape rooms, pub quizzes, dance performances, picnics, writing retreats, Christmas lunches, Engerl and Bengel activities, Halloween parties, theme parties, Karaoke parties, brunches, dinners, concerts, many conferences, lab meetings, KLI courses, and many other social events (e.g., at the Royal Palace Amsterdam). I really enjoyed working and socializing with you.

I also cannot forget all our lovely visitors who brought their enthusiasm and expertise to the department and embraced all our group activities (even when they seemed a bit crazy): Boglárka, Eric, Iniobong, Karen, Kevin, Marcos, Natasha, Paulina, Valeria, Valerio, Vincenzo, and many others. Not too long ago, the social and environmental psychology departments were merged, and we also shared many enjoyable moments in outings, borrels, KLI, and PhD events. Therefore, I would like to thank our nice colleagues and neighbors from the environmental psychology group: Anne, Berfu, Charles, Daniël, Ellen, Elliot, Gabriel, Goda, Irene, Josefina, Kees, Leonie, Linda, Lise, Lu, Nadja C., Nadja Z., Nieke, Stephanie, Thijs, and Valentina.

I also must extend my thanks to the new fabulous cohort of PhD students in the social psychology department that I have truly enjoyed getting to know. Thank you, Agustín, Alisha, Ashay, Ayça, Bart, Bleen, Claire, Eline, Hakan, Jingwen, Laima, Lexy, Madeline, Mortada, Nefer, Valentin, Vera, Yajing, and Yanping, for your support and maintaining a fun and vibrant social atmosphere. The Significant Others still remain very significant and magnificent. I also have to thank my awesome colleagues from the Teaching Unit, especially Ben, Charissa, Else, Eva, Frank, Jasper, José, Laura, Laurent, Liga, Martine, Roxana, Selena, Simon, Stacey, and Wim, for their (emotional) support in the last writing stages of my PhD.

I now need to especially thank all the moments shared with my dearest Coffee chicks group: Aafke, Anne Marthe, Darya, Kim, Marloes, and Susie. We built so many beautiful memories together. I can recall the spooky writing weekend in the middle of nowhere in Friesland, numerous coffee breaks (so much coffee we drank!), fancy brunches, the Tim Burton marathon, the RuPaul's Drag race show in Amsterdam, the epic EASP in Granada, the Michèle Lamont event at the Royal Palace Amsterdam, and countless fun social gatherings. Thank you, ladies, for your friendship, encouragement, and support in my PhD journey. I must also thank my dear officemate, Carla, for all the years of shared PhD companionship and support.

Then, a special thanks to the dedicated Minnaars and Minnaressen group that brought people together from social, environmental, organizational, developmental, and experimental psychology groups, for all the Friday borrels and dinners: Aafke, Anne Marthe, Anita, Aytaç, Ben, Berry, Cátia, Darya, Elliot, Elissa, Felicity, Florian, Frank, Gonneke, Jannis, Jolien, Julia, Justin, Kim, Maja, Marloes, Martijn, Max, Nadine, Ole, Pontus, Rob, Russell, Susan, Susanne, Susie, Tassos, Toon, Wisnu, Yasin, and many others that have joined over the years. Sharing a beer (and snacks) with you was always a pleasant way to unwind at the end of the week.

I must also thank my KLI cohort for the inspiring and engaging research discussions, fun borrels and dinners, friendship, and collaborative and constructive vibe. I have met really amazing people through KLI. Thank you to the members of the GP&IR track, and the Social Cognition one, where the epic Groningen-Utrecht-Amsterdam-Leiden writing retreat emerged. A special thanks goes to Inga, Ilona, Jannis, and Max for the unforgettable moments and adventures. I also sincerely thank my colleagues from the ISPP Summer Academy, the Dutch Political Psychology group, and everyone else who has been part of my PhD journey.

Finally, I have to thank my family. Muito obrigada aos meus pais, irmã, sobrinha, avós e avôs, tios e tias, primos e primas, Bart, Julieta e Índia por todo o apoio ao longo destes anos. Eu sei que me apoiaram da melhor forma que sabiam e podiam, e que podia sempre voltar a casa e para perto do mar, da serra, do rio, do campo, e de Vilar, doce e poético cantinho, em Aveiro. Apesar de este caminho de doutoramento não ter sido fácil, eu estou muito grata e feliz por tudo o que vive e aprendi e por ter encerrado este capítulo da minha vida profissional. Tenho a certeza de que o melhor ainda está para vir e que só posso confiar no universo. Obrigada por me deixarem ser autêntica e trilhar o meu próprio caminho livre de condicionamentos sociais. The deepest heartfelt thanks go to my family lineage. I see you and feel you.

To all of you – Thank you.
