Acknowledgements

Many thanks are due to my supervisors, Marcel Broersma and Karin Raeymaeckers, for their continued support, feedback, advice and encouragement throughout the process of developing and writing this thesis, and to the Universities of Groningen and Ghent for providing an institutional home and financial support for this PhD.

I am also most grateful to Tommaso Venturini, who took on the role of informal supervisor and mentor and provided invaluable guidance and advice on all key aspects of this research as well as on the writing process (channeling an inimitable blend of Bruno Latour, Umberto Eco and Howard Becker in his advice on telling about collective life).

The Digital Methods Initiative at the University of Amsterdam, which I consider my intellectual home, has been a continuous source of inspiration and support throughout these years. I would like to thank all of its members: Richard Rogers, Sabine Niederer, Esther Weltevrede, Erik Borra, Anne Helmond, Bernhard Rieder, Michael Stevenson, Carolin Gerlitz, Lonneke van der Velden, Marc Tuters, Natalia Sánchez Querubín, Simeona Petkova, Nadia Dresscher-Lambertus, Jonathan Gray, Saskia Kok, Emile den Tex, Marloes Geboers, Fernando van der Vlist and Stefania Milan. I would particularly like to register my gratitude to Esther Weltevrede and Jonathan Gray for taking time to read various parts of this dissertation and for their useful comments and encouragement; to Richard Rogers, Carolin Gerlitz and Natalia Sánchez Querubín for taking time to meet and discuss this project with me and for their inspiring ideas and suggestions; and to Erik Borra and Emile den Tex for their support with developing the software tools that I used in this research.

The visiting research period at the médialab at Sciences Po, Paris, facilitated by Tommaso Venturini, provided a welcoming environment to develop this work and I would like to thank Bruno Latour, Tommaso Venturini, Mathieu Jacomy, Christophe Leclercq, Guillaume Plique, Thomas Tari, Vincent-Antonin Lépinay, Barbara Bender, Diégo Antolinos-Basso, Paul Girard, Kari De Pryck, Benjamin Ooghe-Tabanou, Donato Ricci, Audrey Baneyx and Gabriel Varela for lively discussions and feedback during writing workshops, meetings and conversations. I also greatly benefitted from an invitation to visit and present work at the Tow Center for Digital Journalism at Columbia University, as well as subsequent collaborations which emerged from this visit.

The Public Data Lab, of which I am a proud co-founder and member, has provided an ideal environment for the final years of my PhD as well as providing a space for methodological experimentation around the Field Guide to Fake News. Thank you for making the journey rewarding: Tobias Blanke, Carolin Gerlitz, Jonathan Gray, Mathieu Jacomy, Lucy Kimbell, Anders Koed Madsen, Noortje Marres, Michele Mauri, Anders Munk, Sabine Niederer, Kari de Pryck, Richard Rogers and Tommaso Venturini.

I would also like to acknowledge co-authors of articles, chapters and reports, collaborators and participants in summer school and data sprints for time, experimentation and reflection which enriched various chapters. I received invaluable feedback from participants at various conference where different parts of this research were presented, including in Amsterdam, Barcelona, Bath, Berkeley, Cambridge, Coventry, London, New York, Oxford, Paris, Perugia, Sheffield, Siegen, Stockholm, Utrecht and Zurich. Anonymous reviewers from Digital Journalism and New Media & Society provided comments which helped to tighten texts associated with this project. I would also like to note the support of friends and colleagues who supported this work with scripts, tips, calls, conversations and coffees: Sam Leon, Noortje Marres, Craig Silverman, Claire Wardle, Sarah Van Leuven, Stefan Baack, C.W. Anderson, Sylvain Parasio, Michael Stevenson and Phil Howard.

Finally, I would like to thank my family and friends for their love and support, including Lenuta, Carol, Laura, Ruxandra and George, and particularly to my partner Jonathan who was involved in the day to day joys and challenges of this project.
